Healing a Rift in Your Partnership

Sweet or sour, revenge has a powerful pull that only forgiveness can overcome

by Rodd Wagner and Gale Muller

Adapted from Power of 2: How to Make the Most of Your Partnerships at Work and in Life

Gallup Press, November 2009

When Michelangelo wanted to get back at his critic, Vatican Master of Ceremonies Biagio da Cesena, the artist painted him into the Sistine Chapel as Minos, judge of the underworld with a large snake curled around his legs as he watches the damned arrive in Hell. After William L. Shirer was betrayed by his former close collaborator Edward R. Morrow, Shirer wrote a novel featuring a character who was particularly spineless and hypocritical. It was a thinly veiled caricature of Murrow.
